

Cambridge Indymedia Film Screenings Present
Ken Loach's

'Land and Freedom'

The Geldart Pub, 1 Ainsworth Street

7:30 pm, Sunday 29th May

This outstanding film offers a fascinating insight into the Spanish Civil war through the eyes of a young British volunteer, memorably portrayed by Ian Hart. Following his death in present-day Britain, his grand-daughter sorts through an old suitcase containing the mementos of his time in war-torn Spain, providing the framework for the story. Brilliantly directed by Ken Loach, the film is a poignant evocation of that same mix of beauty and ugliness, love and tragedy that other writers on Spain have portrayed, and which all those who have, in different ways, been captivated by that country will instantly recognise. Noted for the use of loosely-scripted dialogue to add spontaneity and immediacy, this film is a classic.
